The development strategy of the economy is developed by the organizations responsible for the economy of the country, the authorities and other structures that carry out activities. This strategy organizes the further development of the country, finding solutions to economic, social and environmental problems on the territory of the country, overcoming the problem, limiting the reforms of economic activity, developing innovations, focusing on recreation, social and environmental problems.

The strategy for the development of the economy is a collection of other provisions and advice developed in order to examine the practical activities of the state and other organizations in construction, art, industry, services, investments, etc., to ensure the economic, social and political progress of the country.

The development strategy of the economy aims to stabilize the country's current and developing economy, ensure economic and social progress in the long term, raise income growth to a high level, put reforms into practice, develop new directions, attract large investments and achieve tremendous success in international scenarios, which will have concepts and methods mainly for the development of economic industry, technologies, entrepreneurship

These strategies develop in a comprehensive collaboration of early ministries, agencies, service organizations, academic centers, industry experts, and entrepreneurs. These strategies are based on periods of a separate year, separated into practical components, and executed through annual computations and monitoring evaluation processes.

In the third direction of the action strategy, the established measures for the further development and liberalization of the established economy occupy an important place in ensuring the economic stability of the country, raising the living conditions of the population. The following priorities are set in this direction:

- increase the openness and competitiveness of the economy;
- development of economic independence;
- strengthening macroeconomic stability;
- modernization and diversification of leading production networks;
- reform of the financial and banking sector;
- further expansion of foreign economic relations;

- active attraction of foreign investments.

Also, the tasks set for the comprehensive study of current issues that are thinking of entrepreneurs, their support, provision of rights and legitimate interests, the development of multidisciplinary farms will serve as an important factor in the future not only to ensure the well-being of families, but also to further increase the economic potential of our country.

The strategy for the development of the economy is, in fact, a document that represents the unity of the established path, goals and methods for the development of economic activity of a state or an enterprise. It will consist in regulating the development of strategy, economic activity, investments, innovations, market development, infrastructure and a number of other industries.

The development strategy includes the use of the actual goals of the enterprise or state, the resources used, problems and ways to solve them, its participants in development.

Noteworthy, international economic relations and new technologies are creating new opportunities for states and enterprises, so development strategies are obliged to be created taking into account the requirements of the present time and independent consistency. These strategies should apply to continuous variability and updates.

The development strategy of the economy includes many skills and decisions. These strategies are defined by incorporating the importance of voter economic progress during the organization, and also include ways to be simple and clear, put into practice and evaluate results.

The most important part is the prudence of the development strategy to be relatively acceptable and capable of implementation. This strategy can assist in the education of comprehensive goals and pathways for states, organizations, or other economic sub-entities.

The economy development strategy is the expected end-of-term planning of one country or one outside, as a spit your game and events program. These strategies are usually implemented by United State organizations and governments and aim to promote the country's economic development, revenue growth, reform coordination, investment engagement, commitment to innovation, job creation, infrastructure development and international relations.

These strategies can usually have goals for many industries, such as technology development, industry strengthening, tourism development, agro-industrial modernization, etc. These strategies take into account the pooling and cracking of external and internal resources to achieve established goals.

Economy development strategies typically include how much is being monitored at the prospect, what established rights and treatment are available, what adequate progress is being made, and other measures.

When these strategies are put into practice, external and internal organizations, international cooperation networks, industry experts and authorities cooperate effectively.
